Investment options – changes to asset allocations and objectives

Each year we review the investment objectives and strategy (the mix of investments) for our investment options to make sure they remain suitable, given our views on the long-term performance of investment markets. This year's review looked at the impacts of an ageing global population (which reduces global economic growth), on our future investment performance.

From this review, we've decided to adjust the Long Term Strategic Asset Allocations (LTSAA) and investment objectives from 1 November 2015. We're slightly lowering the investment return objectives by 0.25%, rather than taking on additional risk in our investment options. We've also revised the likelihood of negative returns for the High Growth option to 5 in every 20 years, from 4 in 20 years previously. Reflecting the changes we've made to the LTSAA, we've changed the asset class ranges in each of our investment options.

You can visit www.cbussuper.com.au/investments to view the updated figures from 1 November 2015.

Note: These changes don't impact the Cbus Self Managed option.
