Complying Fund Letter

Everything an employer needs to know about CBUS

To the employer

This contains payment details and other important information an employer needs to refer to when an employee chooses CBUS to receive their super guarantee (SG) contributions.

Letter of Compliance

CBUS is:

- a resident regulated superannuation fund within the meaning of the Superannuation Industry (Supervision) Act 1993 (SIS)
- not currently or ever has been under direction not to accept any contributions from an employer sponsor (under s.63 of SIS)
- ready to accept super contributions from employers on behalf of their employees, and
- an authorised MySuper provider and meets the insurance requirements to be chosen as a default fund by employers.

If you're not an existing CBUS employer, go to our website to find out how to register and pay your employee super to CBUS.

To process employer superannuation contributions, CBUS needs certain employer information, including: employer name, employer ABN, employer address, contact name and contact number. Employer contributions must detail the period for which the contribution is made.

For more information on joining as a CBUS employer and how to make super payments, visit cbussuper.com.au/employers.

We make managing super easy

Employer Online allows you to manage your employer account details and submit employee super contributions through the CBUS Clearing House (QuickSuper)*.

To access Employer Online, you'll need to become a CBUS employer. Join online at cbussuper.com.au/employer-join.

Alternatively, you can contribute for your employees through any other payment system you choose.

Clearing House

Paying your employees' super is easy with the CBUS Clearing House. It's SuperStream compliant, completely secure and allows you to pay into multiple funds with one payment. Best of all, it's available to CBUS employers at no cost, regardless of how many employees you have. You'll automatically receive access through Employer Online.

For more information visit cbussuper.com.au/employer-faqs.
